Good morning!

A couple of things from me:

Out of scope

- Note that Smith v Fonterra came out last week with the result that Mike Smith has been granted leave to proceed on his three courses of action – does not mean he wins on the substance, but he gets to argue it. This is quite an interesting decision and I'm sure every law student who needs to write some sort of dissertation this year will be extremely excited. It doesn't immediately mean anything concrete for our work and we understand the Minister has a few lines in case asked, but it's pretty interesting. Our legal team is currently doing the deep analysis of this with Crown Law and have offered to come and have a deeper session with Minister Watts in the next few weeks if he's interested.

A few questions

Are there any key milestones, dates you want me to mention to minister today at the weekly meeting?
